I'm not robot!

The purpose of this form is to confirm that the interviewee and the creator of the video have both given their permission for their video to be used for the Biovideo project (see url below).

The Biovideo project [ ]s a not-for-profit project to provide to undergraduate students the opportunity to hear from people at various stages of a career in biomedical research as well as others who may have used their PhD studies as the starting point to launch into other occupations and endeavors (clinical, business, government etc). The project aims to build a library of video interviews that allow individuals to explain their own life experience in science and provide career tips to the interviewer and anyone who chooses to view the video online.

The philosophy of the Biovideo project is for individual students to recruit someone to interview and then independently create a new video interview, made accessible to all via YouTube. By building a library of such videos future students can survey a range of experiences to help decide if undertaking a research degree might be right for them.

A catalogue of finished video interviews is maintained by Drs Bill Phillips and Bronwyn McAllen at the University of Sydney ( ) but the Project does not belong to any individual or institution and all genuine contributions to the catalogue are much appreciated.

The Biovideo project is in its infancy so we very much thank you for contributing your time as interviewee and the interviewer/video creator.

Release

As the interviewee for this Biovideo project video interview I give my permission for the my video likeness and recordings of my voice to be edited and presented via the internet and possibly also played in excerpt for teaching purposes (in lectures).
